PRECOCIOUS LACUNA

Creativity to see space through different angles is needed when one only has a three-bedroom single storey terrace but requires room for far more members of the family. How do we ensure each family member has their privacy within the space that is readily available?

Using a modern open space concept in this long and narrow family hall, the designers of Goldfields Concept are able to bring in creative debossed walls and other features without fringing too much into the usable area. Curvature elements in the wall are highlighted with light yellow paint and half mirrors to capture the mood of the living room. Simple yet cosy, a beige three-seater sofa and matching modern lamp shades on black side tables face the TV cabinet of matching tones.

A round marble feature in the curved arch wall design serves as a "flat" partition into a different space. Here, the dining room is much livelier in its palette scheme with an indoor wall garden that hangs above the upholstered wall panels. The grey of these elements is in cohesion with the modern wood and marble dining table, as well as the contrastingly striking yellow chairs. Overhead, a modern constellation bulb chandelier lends a slightly rustic look to this modern-themed home.

Further ensuring that this home maintains a spacious atmosphere, the designers have lined the cabinets against both side of the wall's length. These white painted built-in cabinetries and shelf lights brightens the space while contrasting with the rich black marble tiles.

The master bedroom adopts a light and airy ambience using white walls, ceilings and a fitted IKEA pax wardrobe with transparent doors. These make the Knappa pendant lamp look like a floating cloud in heaven, completed by an elegant touch of the half-moon mirror. A mini feature wall, the headboard is made out of upholstered brown fabric that lines most of the wall.

Coming to the second bedroom that must house two individuals, the designers have come up with a unique solution. A secure wood panel with its own staircase is fixed to the wall, creating a split-level space. The upper area is simple with white ceiling and grey walls. Below, hidden lights in the headboard make up for the lack of light while the furnishing here are in grey and white.

Unlike the other two bedrooms, the last sleeping space does not have natural light to brighten the ambience. Thus, the designers have ensured an almost fully white area; white walls, white fitted cabinet with transparent doors, white bedding and a large mixture of hidden white and warm lights. Ensuring that the room does not lose character, they have added in a unique triangular upholstered headboard that is softened by the modern round pendant light and warm brown display cabinet.
